

Tuatha de Danann (Faires)

Long ago in Ireland, there were magical beings called the Tuatha de Danann. They were one of the first tribes to arrive and had secret powers.

When warrior tribes came, the Tuatha de Danann lost a battle but didn't want to leave their beloved Ireland. So, they used their magic to become small and live underground.

They created tunnels connecting fairy villages all over the country, each marked by a special hawthorn tree called a Lone Bush. The fairies, though shy, are blamed for mysterious happenings by locals. It's believed bad luck follows if you disturb their homes.

Despite being secretive, fairies love children. Treat them well, and they might grant you a wish near their fairy tree or Lone Bush. Remember, it's best to let these magical creatures live peacefully in their hidden homes. Un